The table flowers were pink and white roses. After luncheon a game of euchre was indulged in, Mrs. W. A. Bunker winning first prize and Mrs. N. J. Pettijohn the second. The tally cards were pleasantly suggestive, taking the form of small Japanese fans on which the date and the number of the table were inscribed. The guests were:

Miss Maud Keebler was eminently successful in mitigating the heat of last Friday for the small party of friends she entertained at 1 o'clock luncheon in compliment to her guest, Miss Lucile Overstolz, of St. Louis. The dainty decorations of the table were all of cool green and white, the flowers being white roses. The menu cards bore charming pictures of celebrated beauties, done in water colors. Miss Keebler's guests were Miss Karnes, Miss Anna Carkener, Miss Frances Wood of Marshall and Miss Alice Chappell.

Mr. Frank Lott gave a porch party Friday evening, in compliment to several visit-ing young ladies, the music of a string or-chestra adding greatly to the pleasure of a delightfully informal evening.

"How you girls can work at anything such a breathless morning as this is incistery to me," remarked the girl in the hammock, addressing the group of young women gathered on the wide plazza, each with some bit of fancy work. "I'm awfully lazy, I know," she continued, "but when the thermomecer is in the fest, the lovellest thing in the world to do is to lie in a hammock and dream of cool things—icebergs and snow and the land of the midnight sun, you know."

"Yes, that sounds very well," said the plump girl, "but while you're dreaming, just imagine the leebergs are mountains of ice cream floating in a sea of soda water. Oh, wouldn't that be an ideal state of af-fairs."

Miss Cora Kyger, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. J. W. Kyger, will be married to Mr. Frant Grimes at the Tabernacie Baptist church on Wednesday, June 21, at 4 p. m. The ceremony will be performed by the Rev. S. M. Brown. The attendants will be Riss Jessie Folk. Miss Kate Colburn, Mr. Ed Cramer and Mr. Boone Halcomb. "It is not wise to allow your thoughts to dwell on impossibilities," said the girl in the hammock, sagely: "It has a tendency to create discontent with one's lot. Now, when I was a bit of a girl I used to visit a place where I think it was never hot, where nobody ever hurried, and where, it seems to me, no one could have been unhappy." The First Congregational church was the scene of an interesting marriage ceremony last Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock, that of Miss Mayme C. Gillham, only daughter of Mr. John Gillham, Jr. to Mr. William Morris West. The church flowers were pink and white roses effectively arranged and set off by screens of palms. Dr. Hopkins efficiated. Miss Gillham was attended by Miss Dewey and Miss Emma West, attired alike in the summer girl's chosen fabric, white organdy. The bride's dainty frock was also of white organdy made over white taffeta and trimmed with Valenciannes and white ribbons. She carried bride roses.

Mr. and Mrs. West left Tuesday evening for a brief wedding journey and will be at home after July I, at 4308 Walnut street, Hyde park.

"Dear me! where was this paradise?"

"Dear me! where was this paradise?"

"Do tell us about it!"

"Do tell us about it!"

"Oh, no; it was in Kentucky, I know."

"All wrong," said the girl in the hammock, complacently. "It was right here in Kansas City! Now you needn't be surprised," as a chorus of "Impossibles" greeted this assertion. "Just remember, please, that this is the way I remember the place; if it was ever hot there, if there were ever files there, though they had no screens, if there was over anything there that was not wholly delightful and lovely and picturesque I do not remember it; and when the weather is insufferably warm, and the world is dry and dusty and commonplace, I like to shut my eyes and go back there for a little time. Whenever I could get permission, and probably sometimes when I couldn't, I would climb the fill near our house, until I came to the stile. Of course, there was a carriage gate, and many a time it stood wide open, but I always went over the sille, and by this quaint entrance stepped from the hot, dusty road down among the flowers and under the lofty, wide spreading trees that formed a cool arch of green down which I walked until a curve brought me in sight of the house.

"And all among the trees and beyond them there were flowers; roses, lilles, peonies, lillacs, hollyhocks, and many, many more. I suppose that, like others of their kind, they bloomed only in their season, but in my memory they all bloom together and continue to bloom straight through a never ending summer, mingling their fragrance with the soft, cool breeze that always stirs the leaves above me and the grass at my feet. number of the table were inscribed. "Then when the 'old cat dies.' I turn to the house. A log house, wide and roomy, behind, its broad porch, with great doors standing open into the spacious hall, with its dark wood floor and wainscoting. At the farther end either great doors stand open, and I look directly out upon the gently sloping lawn, where the young folks of the family are playing croquet, through the trees to the edge of the bluff and far across the great river to the wooded hills upon the other side. There is nothing down East or in Kentucky or even in Virginia that is more beautiful.

'On either side of this hall there are large, cool, quiet roems and in one of them at the open window, sits madame, a welcoming smile on her placid face, her hands always occupied with some small bit of work. Madame inspires me with love and admiration and she is an indispensable part of the pleasure of my visit. The whole house is so quaint and cool, so full of delicius repose, that it is like no other spot in the world to me; but the pleture framed in the doors is even more fascinating, and I go out upon the gallery that runs across the back of the house, and there I find the squirrel still running around in his re-volving house in the titledess fashion which squirrel still running around in his re-volving house in the tireless fashion which he adopted long ago, and I sit down on the bench beside him and offer him a few dainries dear to his squirrel palate. The girls in their white gowns move slowly about over the shaven grass, following the gay balls, and the young men lean in easy attitudes upon their mallets, or polse them for

"As the sun goes down in the west and long slant beams are thrown across the grans, the players gather on the gallery grass, the players gather on the gallery steps, a tall young son brings out a rocking chair for mendame, and a red turbaned mammy brings out glasses of delicious lemonade. I can hear the bits of ice tinkle now and taste the lemonade, too. And if there is one recollection that forces itself upon me unpleasantly, it is that I had always to leave all of these delights and go home at last to a very modern brick house standing near the street. I do not know if I have shown you the charm of the place, but for every delicency in words."

"T should like to see that place, Where is it, or rather, where was it?"

"I am not sure that the very ground upon which my Eden stood has not been carted away," said the girl of the hammock, starting up, "but it was truly right here is the maring of the family, there are many not so very old inhabitants who would remember it. I am going now to have some real lemonade zerved for us, and I promises you than a cold given bower, in pleasound to the place of the place of the place of the bands of Miss Josie Bayha the spactous rooms of the home were transformed into a cool given bower, in pleasound to the place of the maring of the home were transformed into a cool given bower, in pleasound to the place of the p

The final was the most exciting event of the day's sport.

From the start the race was a hot one. Before the mile pole had been reached the riders were bunched, with three exceptions, and each quarter the speed increased. After the first mile and a quarter Inman set the pace, and was compelled to make it a scorcher. When he first got in the lead no one thought there was any chance of his keeping there. Inman is a Missouriferm production, and it was his first professional race. But his awkward appearance when he made his mount deceived the professional trainers and the crowd. Well known professionals found they had struck a sang as they vainly attempted to gain the two feet lead which himan held through the last quarter. Micratein finished second and Coburn third, with six riders only a few feet behind. Time, 4:22-5. First money, 39: second, 360; third, 310.

At the close of the regular events, a quadricden by Gardner, Hackett, Hunt and Enslew went a mile to break the record of the track, pacing Joe Hocker the first half, Hocker broke the track record in 0:58, and the quad finished the mile in 1:56.

ONE GLASS DID IT.

When Samuel Miller Came To He Had Been Robbed of All His Possessions.

Samuel Miller, a farmer from Lynnville, Ia., waiked into Central police station yesterday morning, sans coat, hat, a gold watch and 50. Miller was packed away under a well balanced "jag," but he managed to make it known that, with all his senses and possessions, he had wandered into Ragsdale's saloon, at Sixth and Bluf streets, Friday evening. He remembers taking one glass of beer. Then his memory floated away. When it returned, Miller was sitting beside a billboard. He had been "touched" for everything he had save his shoes and trousers.

"I don't recall having had any trouble with anybody." Miller told the police, Ragsdale, the proprietor of the saioon, was called to the station. He said Miller had been in his place with some men with whom he came in and they left together. The mystery of the Miller robbery still remains unsolved.

BEER MUST BE PAID FOR. >>>>>

JUDGE GATES DECIDES PROHIBI-TION DOES NOT PROHIBIT.

No Biding Behind the Prohibitory Law of Kansas to Evade Payment for Liquor Honestly Bought and Delivered.

There is a strain of Kentucky blood in the Gates family. Some say prohibition deem't prohibit in Kansas. Judge Gates decided yesterday that it doesn't in Missouri and that this favored commonwealth is beyond the pale of the Murray law of interesting memory. Not even the "comity of states" suffices, according to Judge Gates, to permit a purchaser of "booze" to hide behind the prohibitory law of Kansas. A Kansas judge recently held that under the Sunflower law, liquor was not a prop-erty and that a man could not be prosecuted for stealing it, though he could be cuted for stealing it, though he could be punished for stealing the jugs that held it.

Judge Gates holds not only that booze is property of value, but that wherever Judge Gates holds not only that booze is property of value, but that whetever bought it must be paid for.

The decision was rendered in the case of brught it must be paid for.

The decision was rendered in the case of Val Blatz against Bobrecker Brus. The plaintiff consigned a quantity of beer to itself in Leavenworth, being both consignee and consignor. Then, contrary to plaintiff consigned a quantity of beer to itself in Leavenworth, being both consignee and consignor. Then, contrary to the rules and regulations made and provided by the prohibitory law, Herr Blatz resold the liquor to Bobrecker Bros., of this city. The latter refused to pay for it and when sued for the value of the mait beverage set up the unique defense that the plaintiff was violating the per and that the comity of states forbade the legalization by one state of an action which was illegal in another state.

Judge Gates held that the defendants knew the prohibitory law was being violated and that they could not hide behind the known violation of a law. The liquor had been bought and must be paid for. Judgment was rendered for the brewing company in the sum of $18.44.

ON GENERAL PRINCIPLES.

City Attorney Burnham Didn't Like to Dismiss Any Case Against

Among the matters which came before the criminal court yesterday was an old case where Gambler W.. H. Christie had been fined for violating the anti-pool law. The question hinged on the fact as to

The question hinged on the fact as to whether Christie had sold pools on the last city and county elections, and thereby acted as stakeholder. This is clearly a violation of the law, but the evidence was not the most convincing and Mr. Burnham was frank enough to say 30.

"Why don't you dismiss the case?" suggested Judge Wofford. "Christie has left town, hasn't he?"

"I don't like to dismiss a Christie case on general principles." replied Mr. Burnham, and it wasn't dismissed, either, but went over to the September term.

Judge Wofford refused to grant a new trial to Emmet H. Wilson, the ex-commission merchant who was convicted of defrauding a number of other merchants. In accordance with the verdict of the jury, he was sentenced to two years in the peniwas sentenced to two years in the peni-tentiary and was allowed ninety days to file a bill of exceptions. His appeal bond was fixed at $3,000.

BIG COUNTY CONTRACTS.

C. W. Dobbins Will Macadamize Three Miles of the Lee's Summit and Lone Jack Road.

C. W. Dobbins, of Pleasant Hill, was yes terday awarded the contract to macadamize three miles, or about one-quarter of the Lee's Summit and Lone Jack road. The job is worth about $11,000 and there were six bidders. Dobbins' bid was $1.12 per square yard, while the next highest, that square yard, while the next highest, that of White Bros., was $1.14, or only 2 cents on the yard difference.

Colyer Bros. were given the contract to build a $1.390 culvert over Arlington avenue at Mount Washington.
The bids for the improvement of the Chrisman road, over which there has been so much controversy, will be returned to the bidders, pending the decision of the courts in the injunction proceedings brought by the taxpayers to prevent the work from being done and to force the county court to adhere to the main road instead of departing thereform for no other reason than to improve Judge Chrisman's farm at public expense.

Contempt Case Goes Over. M. M. Broadwell, the receiver for the Union railway, who was cited to appear in Judge Henry's court and show why he had not paid into court a sum of money ordered to be paid, appeared before Special Judge Lucas yesterday, prepared to show why he should not be punished for contempt. Judge Lucas continued the entire matter till September 15 without taking action.

Gladys Bradley Gets $2,000. Little Gladys Bradley, who was very severely injured by a Metropolitan cable car several months ago, will get $2,000 as partial compensation for her injuries. When the case was called in Judge Scarritt's court yesterday, a jury was waived and the case was submitted to the court, which found for the plaintiff and gave her $2,000 dameters.

Court Briefs.

The Standard Accident and Benefit Association filed an application yesterday for a pro forma decree approving its articles of association.

Mrs. Emma Benjamin was yesterday granted letters of administration on the granted letters of administration on the estate of the late Moses Benjamin, who left personal property valued at $8,000. G. P. Cain's damage suit against the Metropolitan was dismissed by Judge Scarritt y sterday because the bond for costs had not been filed, as per order of the court.
